Market Commentary

May was a better month for markets with bond and equities delivering stronger returns. The key headline though will be that of the upcoming UK General Election that is going to take place in July. The market impact after the news was muted, with other economic forces and corporate activity driving markets. The main one being the UK Consumer Price Index reading which certainly caught the headlines with the rate falling to 2.3%, within a whisker of the Bank of England 2% target. This means it is likely that the Bank of England will start cutting interest rates in the coming month with August looking the most likely.

The UK is out of recession, not only that, the economy is bouncing back strongly. UK gross domestic product is estimated to have increased by 0.6% in Quarter 1 2024, following declines of 0.3% in Quarter 4 and 0.1% in Quarter 3 2023.

One thing we haven't touched on in recent commentaries is the amount of corporate activity going on, which is certainly having an impact on individual companies and stock markets. This is either share buybacks, dividend announcements or Merger and Acquisition (M&A) activity. One of the largest companies in the FTSE 100, Shell, announced a massive $3.5bn share buyback programme.

On the M&A front we are seeing takeovers across the breadth of the UK market and across a whole host of different sectors. In addition, this has encompassed relatively large companies rather than being solely at the small cap end of the market. One such proposed deal concerned mining giant Anglo American, which recently rejected a £34 billion bid from rival BHP Group. Hargreaves Lansdown, the FTSE 100-listed Bristol broker, rejected a takeover bid from a group of private equity firms.

In summary, it was a much better month with inflation falling, economic growth surprising to the upside and the upcoming election not causing too much volatility in the short term. This meant that both equities and bonds were able to deliver some attractive returns during May.
