Market Commentary

The main news during the month was the larger than expected first interest rate cut by the Federal Reserve and the huge stimulus package out of China. Consumer confidence in the UK took a knock as we cautiously anticipate the forthcoming first Labour Budget at the end of October.

The US central bank lowered interest rates for the first time in four years in September. The much anticipated move will influence mortgages, credit card and saving rates for millions of people in the US - and even around the world. The Federal Reserve reduced the key lending rate by half a percentage point, to a range of 4.75% to 5%. Bond markets rallied into the news but sold off afterward the event, still ending the month in positive territory.

The Chinese economy has been under pressure over the last few years as its struggling property market has been a dark cloud impacting individuals and the banking system. This has had a knock-on impact on to investors' confidence in investing and China has been under pressure for four years. It was at the end of the month that a raft of stimulus measure came with the People's Bank of China (PBOC) Governor Pan Gongsheng announcing plans to lower borrowing costs and allow banks to increase their lending. The Chinese Community Party's politburo, the top decision-making committee led by President Xi, then signalled that the government would borrow money to fund investment spending. It was, however, unclear whether this would be funded with further bond sales beyond what has already been announced. These moves caused the Chinese stock market to bounce strongly in the last week of the month, with the Hang Seng up a staggering 16%.

Away from China, global stock markets were mixed but generally a bit weaker following what has been a strong bounce YTD. As we enter the final quarter of the year, there's a lot still to consider with an election in the US and a Budget closer to home.
