Market Commentary

October was a month overshadowed by uncertainty, driven by conflict in the Middle East, the upcoming US election and closer to home the UK Budget. This saw bond prices fall, equity markets be jittery and volatility in commodities.

The UK budget came and went, whilst the changes weren't as bad as had been feared. Significant changes have been made to tax rates to both corporates and individuals. Linked to this, it seems that there is a growing fear about debt levels and budget deficits globally. Major global government bond yields moved higher, as investors want to be compensated more for the growing debt burden. On the flip side, gold is shining bright as emerging central banks diversify away from debt ridden western bond markets with their reserves.

The conflict in the Middle East continues to escalate and de-escalate almost on a daily basis. The biggest impact this is having is on the Oil price which increased significantly but then fell towards the end of the month.

Equity markets were lower during the month, with the biggest volatility continuing to be driven by China. The stimulus measures that drove the market higher at the end of September continued in the early days of the month but the market went on to disappoint. Sterling weakness vs major global currencies, particularly against the US dollar, meant that UK investors delivered positive returns during the month.

As we move through to the end of the year, we will have a lot more certainty, whatever the outcome may be. This should give investors some confidence, in what is traditionally a strong time to be invested in equity markets.
