Market Commentary

The US election was front and centre during November, with the re-election of Donald Trump as the US president propelled US stock markets to new all-time highs. Closer to home, the Bank of England cut interest rates for the second time this year taking interest rates to 4.75%. In Europe, politics is certainly also having an impact with fragmentation in the governments of both France and Germany.

Back to the US and it was a red sweep with the Republicans taking both the House of Representatives and the Senate, this means they have control for at least two years when the mid-terms elections will take place. Stock markets bounced on proposed cuts to corporation tax – which could make US companies overnight for profitable when introduced. The S&P 500 and Nasdaq 100 were up 7.1%* and 6.5%* respectively in sterling terms during the month. The proposed introduction of tariffs will lead to a re-focussing on US produced goods and potentially could have a positive impact on the US economy. However, this is an incredibly complicated situation and as we saw in 2019 could lead to an all-out trade war which is bad for the global economy.

The news of the re-appointed President wasn't good news for all equity markets, one of Donald Trump's targets has always been China and the Chinese markets were weaker on the news. This was also unwinding some of the strong performance in the Summer from the stimulus packages announced.

Bond markets initially sold off after the Trump announcement because of the concern of greater debt levels, but they eventually calmed, and bond markets delivered strong returns during the month. This was because of a raft of weaker than expected economic data across the globe led to the view that interest rates need to come down quicker than expected.

We would like to wish all our investors a very Merry Christmas and to a prosperous New Year.
